SOCIETY

THE past week has been one of thrills, partly owing to the excitement of meeting the new people and the pleasure of doing more honor to old friends. The good weather of the first half made gadding about a regular joy, whether it was for visiting or for brisk open-air program. The dances were rather small and therefore the more enjoyable. The cabinet was honored at a number of formal and informal dinners, and the day at home of the five hostesses in that circle. Wednesday last, resembled similar happenings of twenty years ago, when throngs were the rule and not the exception. Of course, the great body of callers have no reason to expect that their calls will receive any further attention than the receipt of cards, which courtesy immediately followed the first reception held by the wife of the Secretary of State. Just at present in great demand for every hour of their time, it would be impossible for these newcomers to the official world of the capital to accept but few of the delightful courtesies extended them, and by which they are getting widely acquainted, if they had to give their afternoons to making calls. President and Mrs. Wilson will give bassador, entertained at a farewell tea yesterday afternoon at the embassy. Mme. de Gama, wife of the Brazilian ambassador, is in New York for a few days.

A gathering of well known people is already assured, and the remaining tickets are on sale with Mrs. Charles Poor, 1814 21st street, and Mrs. Lawrence Heap, 1734 K street.
